A word about Liability Insurance....

Liability Insurance for Nurses is a requirement in the RN-BSN Program for progression into clinical courses (NURS 4310 and NURS 4312).

Liability insurance can be purchased through the university marketplace by going to the student resource page on the College of Health Professions website. Click on the link for Student Liability Insurance and follow the instructions. Liability insurance purchased via the marketplace is for the academic year, beginning August 1. This is the least expensive option but only covers you in the student role.

If you want to be covered in both your professional, as well as student role, you may obtain liability insurance coverage on your own and provide the School of Nursing with the face page of the policy, stating the period of coverage. While the School of Nursing does not endorse any particular company, students often request guidance in finding a carrier. Some students report that they obtain a rider to their homeowners' insurance policy for RN Professional Liability Insurance. NSO (Nurses Service Organization) and ProLiability are common carriers used by our students. Typically the policy costs around $100.00 annually.

The School of Nursing does not accept your employer's liability policy unless your employer submits evidence that you will be covered for all student related school activity while enrolled in Georgia Southern University, School of Nursing.
